Letter from families of members of MEK to Mai Sato

August 31, 2024

A number of families of the trapped members in the Mojahedin-e Khalq Organization (MEK, MKO) camp in Albania jointly signed a letter addressed to Dr. Mai Sato, the Special Rapporteur on the situation of human rights in the Islamic Republic of Iran, during which they drew her attention to the gross violation of the most basic human rights in the Manëz camp, and demanded immediate action.

North Korea and the MEK ban pets

August 24, 2024

When the media announced a few months ago that the leader of North Korea had banned the ownership of pets, no one knew that Massoud and Maryam Rajavi had implemented this type of ban in their cult of personality, Mujahedin-e Khalq (MEK) decades ago.

The prohibition of the most trivial everyday concepts in dictatorial systems is proclaimed with various justifications. For example, the dictator of North Korea,

Kim Jong Un, has called keeping a pet dog as a capitalist or bourgeois behavior and against the socialist lifestyle. North Korea's government is accusing people with pet dogs of committing "non-socialist behavior".

But in the Cult of Rajavi, these restrictions are imposed on the members with other justifications.

Former UN rapporteur for Iran under fire for sharing stage with MKO terrorists

August 28, 2024

Javaid Rehman, who until recently acted as the UN special rapporteur for Iran, recently attended an event by the anti-Iran MKO terror cult.

The former UN special rapporteur for Iran, known for his close ties with the Albania-based anti-Iran terrorist cult MKO, is again under fire for attending an event hosted by the group.

Javaid Rehman, who until recently served as the UN special rapporteur on the "human rights situation in Iran," was seen participating in an event organized by the MKO terror cult, where he presented another fictitious report on the "human rights situation" in the Islamic Republic.

The event, sponsored by the MKO terror cult, has drawn sharp criticism for Rehman's association with the group.

Child soldiers speak of their nightmares years after leaving the MEK

August 19, 2024

Last week, some former child soldiers of the Mujahedin-e Khalq (MEK) spoke about their nightmares, which still torment them years after leaving the group.

The pain that seems to be common to all the traumatized children of the MEK. Some have been able to recover from these sufferings, and some still have nightmares or at least remember them.

Mohammad Reza Torabi, a former child soldier of the MEK, shared this on his X account on August 14, 2024:

“I used to have nightmares of Mujahidin two or three nights a week. Of course, not only me, but all the children who escaped from this cult have these dreams. All our dreams are similar. I open my eyes and with the mentality I have now, I am again in the Mujahidin. I tell myself no! It is not possible, I ran away and I was outside, how did I come back to this hell again? I try to escape and get out and find a way out, but the Mujahedin and Rajavi officials don’t let me stand in front of them. They tell me that it is here and there is no way out. I wake up and my heart is pounding on my chest and I am afraid. Then I slowly come to my senses and realize that it was just a dream.”

“Although I am actually 38 years old. And no matter how much I have walked through the path of healing and distanced myself more and more from my past, it still sneaks up on me. At night, as if to remind me of who I am and where I came from. Don’t forget. My five-year-old daughter sleeps peacefully. Now, I have to comfort myself.”

MEK’s shadow in EP

THE CONTROVERSIAL AND AGING EXILED IRANIAN OPPOSITION IS WORKING TO GAIN INFLUENCE IN BRUSSELS

August 5, 2024

While former U.S. Vice President Mike Pence and former Secretary of State Mike Pompeo were heaping praise on the MEK at the group’s annual gathering in Paris in early July, the group was making similar advances in nearby Brussels.

They not only create a negative climate for diplomacy with Iran, but by embracing and normalizing non-transparent actors with destructive agendas, they also contribute to eroding the integrity of democratic systems.

The CEO of Nejat Society in the 16th court session of MEK trial

MASOUD RAJAVI'S CONFESSION TO THE EXPLOSION OF THE OFFICE OF THE ISLAMIC REPUBLIC PARTY

August 17, 2024

Ebrahim Khodabandeh, a former member of the Muahedine Khalq (MEK) and the CEO of Nejat Society, attended the 16th hearing of the accusations of the leaders of the MEK and the group as a legal entity.

Ebrahim Khodabandeh, as a former official of the MEK's international relations in different countries, took the stand at the court and stated:

"I was a member of the MEK in the international relations department for 23 years and I have been active in the MEK's affairs in more than 20 countries."

Khodabandeh further stated that a public meeting was held at the beginning of Massoud Rajavi's presence in Iraq.

"In this meeting, the explosion of the office of the Islamic Republican Party was discussed and Masoud Rajavi declared that the explosion of the building was an explosion out of the anger of the people! But what did he mean by people? This explosion was the anger of the Mujahedin-e Khalq."

(Khalq means people in Persian.)
