

Happy New Year

As we reflect on the passing year, we are filled with gratitude for your unwavering support and partnership you've provided us. Your kindness, generosity and dedication have helped us make a meaningful impact on the lives of the families deprived of visiting their loved ones trapped in the 'MEK' camp in Albania.

This holiday season, we wish you peace, joy and happiness. We wish that the coming New Year brings hope, new opportunities and shared successes. We look forward to working together over the coming year as we continue our mission to make the Nejat Society, or more precisely our Nejat Family, as great as possible, and to fulfill the families desire to unite with your children.

We wish you all a very Happy New Year

The hashtag “MEK terrorists” is trending again

December 16, 2024

The Mujahedin-e Khalq (MEK) and Maryam Rajavi were once again the subject of Iranian anger and hatred at the top of Iran-related hashtags. Iranian users used the hashtag “MEK terrorists” tens of thousands of times within a few hours.

Mohammad Reza Torabi, a former child soldier of the MEK: “The reality is that this old woman and her criminal husband, who occasionally issues announcements from his mouse hole and has become a homeless rooster, have long been considered dead to the Iranian people. Nothing can bring them back to life. Today is the best time to say once again #MEKterrorist.

Salome Seyednia, host of Iranian TV channel, Manoto: MEK is a terrorist group that has no credibility or support in Iran! They are very despised and have no standing among the Iranian people! Don't waste your time on them!

On the eve of Christmas, MEK hostages deprived of joy of life

Raise Awareness about rights of MEK members on International Migrants' Day

December 18, 2024

On International Migration Day, members of the MEK are deprived from their human rights as Iranian migrants in Europe. Their rights are actually violated by the group leaders rather than the host countries.

Each year, International Migrants' Day is observed on 18 December. Designated by the United Nations General Assembly on 4 December 2000, in response to increasing migration around the world, the day aims to draw attention to migrants' human rights and highlight their contribution to host societies.

However, the UN and other international human rights bodies neglect the disastrous situation of over 2 thousand MEK members who are taken as hostages in the MEK headquarters in Manez, a village near Tirana, the capital of Albania. They have no legal status in Albania. They are not considered as refugees or asylum seekers or migrants. Their identity is only defined by their membership in the Cult of Massoud Rajavi (MEK).

December 10, Day of Shame for Human Rights Violators

December 11, 2024

International Human Rights Day, December 10, should be a moment of pride for human society, but for many oppressed individuals and groups, this day is just another reminder of the injustices they suffer every day. For an organization like Mujahedin-e Khalq (MEK), which claims to fight for freedom and justice, the irony is bitter: they themselves are the violators of the rights of their members, keeping them in solitary confinement and denying them the most basic freedoms.

THE TRUE FACE OF OPPRESSION

Inside the MEK camps, beyond the facade of the rhetoric of fighting tyranny, there is a dark reality. The organization's members face an internal regime that violates every principle of human rights. They are kept in total isolation, deprived of contact with the outside world and, most importantly, with their families. In the name of discipline and dedication to the cause, these people are treated as property of the organization, not as human beings. What is the difference between an authoritarian regime and an organization that imprisons the minds and bodies of its members? The answer is simple: none. The MEK, which claims to fight oppression, is itself a tool of oppression for those who constitute the flesh and blood of its organization.

Thinking about mother is a crime

In the MEK thinking about mother is considered a crime

December 23, 2024

I wanted to write a few lines for the mothers who have children captive in the Manze camp! In our current era, which is the era of technology and information, the members of the MEK, especially in the Manze camp, are deprived of everything! They cannot even contact their families, thinking about their mother is considered a crime in the Rajavi's organization and anyone who asks members to contact their father or mother will be punished and forced to force the members! They have no feelings in their relationships with their parents and family, and if any member remembers his mother for a moment, he must be punished in the meeting and tell why he remembered his mother!

The International Human Rights Day and MEK victims

December 9, 2024

Tomorrow is the International Human Rights Day. A day to remind the world of each and every human being's fundamental rights. International days are occasions to educate the public on issues of concern, to mobilize political will and resources to address global problems, and to celebrate and reinforce achievements of humanity.

Thus, tomorrow is an occasion for recognize the human rights of thousands of people who are involved with the oppressive cult-like system of the Mujahedin-e Khalq (MEK).

Based on the United Nations's definition, Human Rights Day, annually around the world on 10 December, commemorates the anniversary of one of the world's most groundbreaking global pledges: the Universal Declaration of Human Rights (UDHR). "This landmark document enshrines the inalienable rights that everyone is entitled to as a human being – regardless of race, color, religion, sex, language, political or other opinion, national or social origin, property, birth or other status."

The UDHR was proclaimed by the United Nations General Assembly in Paris on 10 December 1948 and sets out, for the first time, fundamental human rights to be universally protected. This year's theme is: Our Rights, Our Future, Right Now.

As the UN states, this year's theme of Human Rights Day is a call to acknowledge the importance and relevance of human rights in our everyday lives. "We have an opportunity to change perceptions by speaking up against hate speech, correcting misinformation and countering disinformation."

The leader of the MEK and the MEK-run media are actually propaganda machines that propagate hate speech, misinformation and disinformation. They suppress any voice that reveals their atrocities and even any voice that criticizes their attitudes. This is the time to mobilize action to reinvigorate a global movement for human rights of the MEK victims.
