

Gazeta Impakt reveals MEK disinformation machine

April 28, 2025

The Albanian newspaper Gazeta Impakt reports on the fake news published by the Albanian Daily news on behalf of the MEK. the report reads:

Albanian Daily News spread disinformation about “1 thousand French mayors” supporting Maryam Rajavi

Anisa Skëndaj’s “Albanian Daily News” has joined Maryam Rajavi’s Mujahideen disinformation campaign in Camp Ashraf 3 in Manzë.

The “Albanian Daily News” portal recently published one of the MEK’s communiqués, without verifying the news that was provided to it by Maryam Rajavi’s Mujahideen command.

In a news item published on April 14 by “Albanian Daily News”, it claims that thousands of French municipalities have lined up against Iran and support the elderly terrorist Maryam Rajavi.

Suspicious Deaths at Camp Ashraf 3 (Albania): Unanswered Questions for the MEK Leadership

April 19, 2025

In recent years, multiple reports have emerged of repeated and suspicious deaths among members of the MEK at their camp in Albania, known as Ashraf 3. These reports raise serious concerns about the health, human rights, and transparency within the organization.

The consistent use of vague explanations, the refusal to release updated photographs of the deceased, and the absence of autopsy reports or independent investigations all point toward a troubling lack of accountability.

We call for the following:

- Independent autopsies under international supervision
- Transfer of deceased bodies outside the camp for forensic examination
- Unrestricted access for independent observers to Ashraf 3
- Installation of surveillance systems to ensure minimal human rights compliance

The Rajavi Cult in the US: From Pressure Tool to Political Responsibility

April 27, 2025

The Mujahedin-e Khalq Organization of Iran (commonly referred to as the “Cult of Rajavi”) has remained a controversial fixture in U.S. Iran policy for decades. While some American hawks have used the group as leverage against the Islamic Republic, a growing wave of criticism from U.S. officials, analysts, and institutions has called into question its legitimacy and the risks associated with its support.

This article draws on critical American perspectives to analyze the nature of the group, its lack of credibility, and the dangers it poses to U.S. foreign policy.

The most recent illustration of MEK's Cult-like nature

April 5, 2025

As a religious Marxist group, the Mujahedin-e Khalq (MEK) mixes the traits of both ideologies. However, the rituals of the group is a pivotal representation of cult-like behavior.

The most recent image that was depicted by the group's media proved the fact that the MEK is a cult. The image of residents of Ashraf 3 in Albania saying the prayers of Eid al-Fitr.

Eid al-Fiṭr is an Islamic celebration. It falls on the first day of Shawwal, the tenth month of the Islamic calendar. Eid al-Fiṭr is celebrated by Muslims worldwide because it marks the end of the month-long dawn-to-dusk fasting (sawm) of Ramadan.

Eid al-Fiṭr has a particular prayer that is generally performed in an open field or large hall. It may only be performed in congregation. Like many other Muslims around the world, the MEK's rank and file perform the religious ritual near their newly-built mosque at Ashraf 3.

Nevertheless, the images of the Eid's prayer at the MEK's headquarters in Albania illustrates a sexually-segregated population wearing uniforms, repeating the same rituals with pale, dull faces without a hint of emotion in them.

Hamid Atabay, former member of the Cult of Rajavi testifies about Eid al-Fiṭr prayer saying that it took the group members a long time to get organized in the rows and they were forced to wear uniform clothing even for their socks.

CIA analyst: we funded and trained the MEK

April 7, 2025

As the United States and Iran are at a critical juncture, worries on a military conflict are increasing.

Tensions have escalated under President Donald Trump's "maximum pressure" campaign meant to deter Tehran from developing its nuclear program.

In response Tehran's policy is to not engage in direct negotiations with the United States while Iranian nation is under the US's maximum pressure campaign and military threats.

Sponsoring the formerly designated terrorist group, MEK is considered a proof for US's illegal stance against Iran.

Our terrorism was when we funded and trained the MEK who we used to declare as a terrorist organization. They were carrying out attacks against civilian targets inside Iran.

Who are the MEK's lobbyists in the US government?

April 13, 2025

In September 2012, the Mujahedin-e Khalq was removed from the list of foreign terrorist organizations of the US State Department. This was the outcome of the group's heavy lobbying campaigns. However, the MEK lobbyists are still actively lobby in favor of the group in the US government. The mechanisms are complicated and fraudulent.

In 2017, a former CIA counterterrorism officer, Philip Giraldi of the American Herald Tribune newspaper, warned about the relationship between the MEK and American politicians and the increasing rise of the formerly-terrorist designated group in the United States. Giraldi ironically stated that if you are a terrorist group and have a history of carrying out terrorist operations against Iran and the United States itself, you can easily pay and spend money in Washington, even having a lobby office on Pennsylvania Avenue in Washington, D.C.

This law is actually known as the Foreign Agents Registration Act (FARA), which was passed in 1938. It requires lobbyists and representatives of foreign entities in the United States to register their activities and expenses with the Department of Justice, and its main goal is to provide transparency about foreign influence on American policymaking and public opinion.
