Israel, Albania and MEK to tighten alliance

The Albanian Prime Minister who hosts the Mujahedin Khalq Organization, visited Israel last week.

The three-day visit took place, after the leader of the MEK, Maryam Rajavi, visited the Israeli ambassador to Tirana in her headquarters in Albania.

Albanian Prime Minister Edi Rama's visit to Israel was focused on cybersecurity. He visited the head of Israel's National Cyber Directorate, Gaby Portnoy, according to the Times of Israel.

In September, Israel offered cyber-defense assistance to Albania, days after the Balkan state severed its diplomatic ties with Iran based on allegations that the Islamic Republic had carried out cyberattacks against the country in July.

Today, the formerly terrorist designated People's Mojahedin of Iran (PMOI/ MEK) are used as cyber terrorists sponsored by US, Israel and their subsidized partner Albania.

The new alliance is focused on cyber warfare, what the MEK's troll farm has expertise and experience in.

The group's financial support and data source of intelligence seems to be generously provided by the enemies of their enemy.

The MeK, a Predecessor of ISIS in Attack on Worshipers

Habilian Website

October 30, 2022

As a result of a terrorist attack on the holy shrine of Shah-e Cheragh in Iran's southern city of Shiraz on October 26, 13 people have been killed and 30 others wounded.

ISIS late Wednesday claimed responsibility for the attack on its Amaq news agency. It said an armed militant stormed the shrine and opened fire on its visitors. It claimed that some 20 people were killed and dozens more were wounded.

Two children were among the victims, according to state-run Press TV.

CCTV footage broadcast on state TV on Thursday showed the attacker entering the shrine after hiding an assault rifle in a bag and shooting as worshipers tried to flee and hide in corridors.

The day after the police operation against the People's Mojahedin in the Paris suburbs, European and world public opinion were shocked to discover individuals voluntarily turning themselves into human torches.

What level of fanaticism could push seemingly sane people to such extremes? Moreover, some of the "spectators" tried to lock the access of rescue services which could have saved the victims' lives. The French judicial system could only note the facts preventing any repetition.

The prosecutor's office stated that very day a criminal enquiry possible 'obstruction of rescue services' and 'provocation to suicide'. It will soon demand an arrest warrant. The crime of obstructing rescue efforts can be punished with up to 7 years in prison.

In June 2003, when Maryam Rajavi was arrested by French Police in her headquarters in the Parisian suburb, Auver sur d'Oise, Mostafa Mohammadi was a sympathizer of the group and two of his children Somayeh and Mohammad were serving as child soldiers in the Mujahedin-e Khalq's military camp in Iraq. That morning, Mostafa received a call from the group. "They told me that Maryam Rajavi was arrested and members had to commit suicide in front of French embassies to protest her arrest," Mostafa recalls. The world was shocked by the scenes of self-immolations of MEK members in western cities.

Mostafa got ready to set himself on fire in front of French embassy in Ottawa. He poured petrol all over his body but a journalist snatched the lighter from his hand and a police officer stopped him. Other MEK sympathizers on the scene, were just watching him.

Could hosting a banned Iranian dissident group compromise Albania's security?

Some 30 kilometres west from Albania's capital Tirana, nestled between a mountain range and the Adriatic Sea, lies the town of Manëz.

With a population of roughly 7,000 and picturesque views in every direction, it is a typical Albanian town, save for one fact: it hosts Camp Ashraf-3, the base of Iranian dissident group known as the People's Mujahedin of Iran.

The group has had a presence in Albania since at least 2013.

Ask the MEK, how to make a violent insurgent out of a normal protester

Nejat Bloggers

October 11, 2022

Civil protests in Iran often ends with the arrest of some MEK-affiliated insurgents who have committed acts of violence in the scenes of peaceful protests. In recent protests in Iran that was sparked by the death of Mahsa Amini, a number of arrested ones turned out to have been manipulated by the troll farm of the Mujahedin Khalq. The insurgents were arrested under the accusation of spreading propaganda to incite riots and providing incendiary material to demonstrators, following orders from members of the group in Camp Ashraf 3, Manza, Albania.

Since the disarmament of the Mujahedin Khalq Organization by the US military in 2003, the group has been focused on a cyber warfare against the Iranian government. The war includes cyber attacks on computer systems and a disinformation campaign based on fake accounts in social media. The rank and file of Maryam Rajavi are actually soldiers of the cyber army that once was the actual army of Rajavi to launch terrorist acts. In the cult-like structure of Rajavi's army, members are always under supervision by different layers of the hierarchy.

Iran's interior Minister on the terrorist act in Shah Cheragh Shrine

IRNA

October 30, 2022

Shiraz, IRNA – Interior minister said combination war plot of enemies against Iran will lead nowhere, and terrorist act in Shah Cheragh Holy Shrine by shooting at innocent people and their children was a sign of enemies' desperation.

Interior Minister Ahmad Vahidi said, "The October 26 terrorist attack in Shah Cheragh Holy Shrine was a phased in the enemies' project, whose objective is intriguing insecurity and instability in the country."

He emphasized that in that terrorist act the United States, Israel, the monarchist groups, the MKO, the ISIS and some western countries were involved, and this event is a complete file of the intriguers of corruption, darkness, and terror."

British sociologist sees hands of foreign terrorists in Iran unrest

IRNA

October 15, 2022

The recent unrest in Iran has its roots in foreign terrorist organizations' attempt to provoke people to pursue their own agenda, which is overthrowing the political establishment, a British sociologist believes.

David Miller told IRNA on Monday that some foreign elements who pursue their own geopolitical agendas fanned the flame of the recent protests in Iran to pursue a regime change policy.

As to the scenario made by foreign forces to wreak havoc in Iran, Miller noted that it was invented by sources who had a reason to invent such things, which is that they are connected to entities with specific geopolitical interests, especially the US, the Zionists, and the Mujahedin-e Khalq (MKO).

About Nejat Society

Nejat Society consists of some former members of the Iranian Mojahedin-e Khalq Organization (MEK, MKO, Rajavi cult) and the families of the present members seeking to contact their loved ones.

Some of the aims of Nejat Society are:

To inform as widely as possible about the real cultic nature of the MEK and their deception techniques to recruit young and unaware individuals.

To act as a pressure group to persuade the cult leaders to respect the basic rights of the members according to the Universal Declaration of Human Rights and other international conventions.

To reconcile and reunite people who leave the MEK with their families, by mutual consent, and to involve established Iranians in helping these vulnerable people

IRAN. Behind the protests of the veil, the terrorism of the Mojahedin-e Khalq

Western Bloggers

October 8, 2022

The death of the young Kurdish girl Mahsa Amini, after being arrested for not wearing the veil correctly, sparked protests, demonstrations and exploitation.

I do not want to discuss the legitimacy of these protests but I am struck by the news of October 1: The Iranian Ministry of Intelligence has presented a report according to which terrorist groups have incited the protests.

According to news agency reports, 49 members of the Mojahedin-e-Khalq group, considered terrorist by Tehran and other states, were arrested, spreading propaganda to incite riots and providing incendiary material to demonstrators, following orders from members of the group in Albania.

Human Rights organizations have extensively documented abuses within the group, and the Iranian population itself does not recognize any legitimacy, indeed there is a profound hostility towards the MEK for the support provided to Saddam during the Iran-Iraq war.

Veil or not, it is difficult for Iranians and Iranians to forget the trail of blood left by the MEK.
